Background

Mr. Walker was born into a Latter-day Saint family in Jacksonville, Florida. As a fourth-generation Mormon, he was baptized at the age of eight and in his teens participated in the “baptism for the dead” rituals in the Mormon temple in Salt Lake City. He also held the Mormon Aaronic Priesthood serving as Deacon, Teacher, and Priest. Mr. Walker left the Mormon Church and in 1976 he received Jesus Christ as his Lord and Savior. He and his wife, Jimmie, are currently members of Fielder Church in Arlington, Texas and have three children and eight grandchildren.

Ministry

Rev. Walker is president of Watchman Fellowship, an apologetics ministry based in Arlington, Texas that equips Christians to share the gospel with those in world religions, heretical sects, cults, the occult, as well as other controversial doctrines and faiths. His specializations include atheism, Mormonism, the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society (Jehovah's Witnesses), Islam, Scientology, and psychics. Mr. Walker is also cofounder of the Atheist Christian Book Club, a monthly gathering of atheists and Christians discussing books from both perspectives (www.AtheistChristianBookClub.com).

He teaches and preaches throughout the United States and internationally in hundreds of churches, colleges, and universities. He has also led mission trips and evangelistic outreaches at Jehovah's Witnesses' Conventions, Mormon temple openings and pageants, and New Age events.

Because of his own background and his love for those in new religious movements and alternative faiths, James Walker has invested his life into reaching them with the true Gospel of Jesus Christ. His desire is to work together with local churches train and equip believers to reach out to those of other faiths by earnestly contending for the faith (Jude 3) while speaking the truth in love (Ephesians 4:15).
